

Suitable materials and design features

Wooden door surrounds and traditional stone details and Georgian window divides.

Slate roof and gable feature above the windows. Windows have traditional painted detail surrounds.

Brick built building with stone detailing to the corners and sash windows.

Traditional stone detailing to the garage door

Stone detailing to the corners and soffit with a brick chimney.

Traditional natural stone building with brick detailing, stone sill and sash windows

Bay windows with traditional sash

Painted Cobble and thatch roof

Painted wooden shop front with painted fender to the walls and stone detailing.

Suitable roof forms and materials

The inner roof is broken up through a mix of gable ends and is stepped due to the topography.

Slate roof with brick chimney, Coping stone, stone soffit and fascia features.

Crag tile roof with brick chimney, hipped away from the street but at varying heights within the terrace.

Industrial gable ended roof forms creating interest.

Thatched roofs with brick chimneys.

Rendered gable ends, coping stones and rendered chimneys.

Undesirable features

Utilitarian and placeless design with blank facades and no roof detailing. An imposing scale out of keeping with the topography.

Faux stone with no or plain window details that are poor quality, foreign to the area and out of keeping with the local context.